“We’re in a kind of business where we know that people would much rather cut down on other areas of discretionary spending before they decide to either down-trade or cut down on their overall daily cigarette consumption.”